

In response to the FCC's proposal to expand Low Power FM service to take priority over current FM national translator service, I urge the FCC to allow translator services such as K-LOVE radio to remain on the air.

Translators, like K-LOVE radio, provide a much-needed service to local communities.

K-LOVE provides an alternative to other secular stations and reaches thousands of listeners on FM translators.

It is a valuable service in the Amarillo, Texas, area that no other station can provide.

If these translators were to be displaced by a Low Power FM station, it would have a negative impact on the Amarillo area.

K-LOVE operates in the public interest by offering positive family-friendly programming that I have come to enjoy and depend upon.

I urge the FCC to allow K-LOVE translators to continue broadcasting on all its current frequencies.

Replacing them with Low Power FM stations would be detrimental to broadcasting in many communities across the country.

Thank you.
